

Mumblr User Guide

When you enter Mumblr's home page, you will have several options. First, you may notice the search bar. This allows you to search through the website to find any articles with the given name. You will also see the navigation bar. Clicking on the "Sign Up" or "Log In" buttons will take you to the signup and login pages respectfully. Click on the "Home button" to return to this page anytime.

The signup page will have you enter your name, a valid email, and a password of at least 6 characters. Once the information is added, clicking the "Create User" button will create the user and display the new information. Clicking "edit" will allow you to change the account information and clicking "Home" will take you to the Home page.

The login page asks you to enter your email and password. After pressing the "Login button", you will be logged in. Clicking "back" will take you to the Articles page. Clicking "Log out" in the navigation bar will log you out. The "Show" button will display your account information. Clicking "edit" will allow you to change the account information. The "Destroy" button will log you out and delete your account.

In the Articles page, you will see a list of all articles that have been created. Clicking on a show button near an article will allow you to read it. It will also allow you to create a comment by filling out the name and comment fields and clicking the "Create comment" button. You will then see your comment posted. Below the comment, there are 2 buttons. Press "Edit Comment" to edit your comment. Press "Destroy Comment" to delete it. Back in the Articles page, click "edit" to edit the original article. Clicking "delete" will allow you to delete the article if you were the one to publish it. Clicking the "new article" button near the top will allow you to create a new article.

To create a new article, you will need to be signed in. Fill the title field, at least 5 characters, and the Text field, at least 10 characters. Click "Create Article" to create the article or "back" to cancel and return to the articles page.
